sisted in Following Him

Patrolman Daniel J. Shine, of the Astoria police station, Long Island City, was shot twice and seriously wounded early yesterday morning by one of two men whom he had stopped to question and search. His assailant escaped. The patrolman is in Flushing Hospital.

John J. Ives, a letter carrier, told him of the two men. The letter carrier thought they were a rough-looking pair to be abroad so early in the morning. Shine walked down the street to look them over and confronted them in front of 51 Jackson Avenue.

Shots Fired From Pocket

Thomas J. Craven, of Corona, the first of the pair whom Shine elected to search, admitted without question, and his pockets yielded nothing of interest to the patrolman. As Shine turned to the second man the latter fired twice without removing the revolver he used from his pocket.

Shine managed to draw his own revolver and pull the trigger as he fell, but the bullet went wild. Craven made no attempt to get away and was turned over to patrolmen who responded to the shouts Ives was blowing on a police whistle.

Craven said that the gunman was a stranger to him. They had met by chance a few minutes earlier, he said, and the stranger had told him a hard-luck story which, in combination with his appearance and the loneliness of the spot at that hour, impelled Craven to give him a dollar, although he had less than $2 in his pocket at the time.

Stranger Refused to Go Away

The stranger, Craven said, did not seem to be satisfied with this haul and walked along with him, expanding on his tale of misfortune. Craven said that he was afraid to tell the man to leave him alone or to try to get away himself and was walking along with him unwillingly and rather apprehensively when the patrolman appeared. Shine is forty-two years old and has been a policeman fifteen years. He is married and lives at 30 East Polk Avenue, Corona, Queens.

Police Begin Hunt for Autos Sunk in River

Report of Machines Driven Off
Pier to Collect Insurance
Causes Investigation

Detectives attached to the Bathgate Avenue police station in the Bronx and the crew of the police boat John E. Hyman, acting on information that has come to the police that a large number of autos may be submerged in the East River at the foot of Tiffany street, off the Hunts Point section, yesterday set to work with grappling irons in an endeavor to locate and raise these machines.

Report has been made that machines have been pushed off the pier at night by automobile owners who wished to collect insurance on used cars before purchasing new ones. It is believed also that some of the cars, by thieves in robberies may have been pushed into the river to keep the police from getting on their trail.

Estimates of the number of submerged machines run as high as fifty. Swimmers at that point, according to the detectives, have reported coming in contact with various parts of cars and divers, especially, have complained of striding parts of machines in plunges from high points.

Detective Held Without Bail in Homicide Case

Haggerty Asserts He Is Victim of False Identification in Shooting of Lazaro

Detective Jeremiah Haggerty, forty-three years old, of 4516 Park Avenue, the Bronx, held on a short affidavit charging homicide in connection with the shooting of Joseph Lazaro, 234 East Fourteenth Street, was held without bail yesterday by Magistrate Charles E. Simms, in West Farms court. The hearing will be continued next Wednesday.

Haggerty was arrested Thursday morning at the Bathgate Avenue Station in the Bronx, where he was picked out of a line-up of policemen and detectives by Joseph P. Pazzano, of 324 East Fourteenth Street. Pazzano said the detective posed as a revenue officer and arrested him and his friend, Lazaro, for carrying a tin can of red wine.

He said Haggerty fired two shots at the can, one of which struck Lazaro in the abdomen. Lazaro died at Fordham Hospital Thursday.

In the Bronx County jail Haggerty said: "I am the victim of a false identification. I hope the public will hold in abeyance its decision in my case."

Haggerty was brought into court by Captain Andrew Wines, of the Seventh Detective District, and Detective Frank A. Pickett, the prisoner's former working partner.

Assistant District Attorney William F. Quigley asked for the adjournment until Wednesday, saying he wanted to interrogate some witnesses in the meantime. Samuel Goldstein, attorney for Haggerty, objected to the adjournment, saying his client was entitled to an early trial. The adjournment was granted.

Woman Charges Bogus Newark Mayor Took $200

Says She Met Him at Dinner and Was Robbed After
Taxi Ride

ORANGE, N. J., Aug. 20.—The police here have notified the authorities in Newark to be on the lookout for a man who describes himself as "the Mayor of Newark," and who is alleged to have robbed Mrs. Aditia Kilgore, who lives at the Somerset Hotel, in New York City, of $200 in cash here last night.

Mrs. Kilgore reported to the police that she was returning from Philadelphia yesterday, after spending several days there with her husband, when she met a man on the train who gave him the name of George Spitali, and who invited her to have dinner with him in Newark. At the dinner Spitali is alleged to have introduced Mrs. Kilgore to "the Mayor of Newark."

Later in the evening Mrs. Kilgore told the police, Spitali left the party and "the Mayor" and a friend offered to take her to the train. The three entered a taxi cab and the ride ended at the apartment house in this city where Mrs. Kilgore says she was robbed.

Daughter to Claim Estate Hayes Left To Stenographers

Physician's Widow Insists
New Haven Man Who Ignored Wife Had Deserted
Earlier Mate Years Ago

Special Dispatch to The Tribune

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Aug. 20.—Mrs. Margaret Hayes Harbottle, of Columbus, Ohio, filed notice with the Surrogate here to-day of her intention to contest the will of Jeremiah Miner Hayes, of this city, which was admitted to probate May 31.

Mrs. Harbottle, who is the widow of a physician, said she had proof that Hayes, who left his entire fortune to his stenographers, ignoring the woman thought to be his legal wife, was her father, who had deserted her mother and herself many years ago.

Harbottle said, when her father, whose name was Jeremiah Miner Hayes, deserted his family in Columbus, going away with a woman, Mrs. Harbottle produced her parents' marriage certificate, which bears the names of Jeremiah Miner Hayes and Julia A. McCullough and the date of August 6, 1877. They never heard from him again, she said, nor did he communicate with his sister, who lives in Columbus. A few weeks ago, however, Mrs. Harbottle met a woman from New Haven in Columbus who told her of the eccentric will of Jeremiah Miner Hayes, a New Haven real estate dealer, who had ignored his wife and left his fortune to stenographers in the office.

After consulting her father's sister Mrs. Harbottle decided that the real estate dealer was her father, and came to this city to claim a share of his estate. So far as she knows, her father never obtained a divorce from her mother.

Hayes came to New Haven about thirty years ago and married Margaret Ball, of this city, four years later. She survives him, but made no attempt to contest his will. He kept by him always a photograph of three children, who, he said, were the children of his sister in Columbus. Mrs. Harbottle says she is one of those children and the others are her older brother and sister.
